ABSTRACT

The Edutainer UX Designer/Game Designer internship provided a controlled learning environment that integrated computer science and interactive design concepts. The curriculum prioritized conceptual clarity, logical reasoning, and practical application over memorization. I used iterative practice to convert the assignments. It also introduced ideas related to game design and user experience, such as gamification, usability, interface design, and user flow. In order to turn unstructured data into organised information, transcription tools and AI-assisted refining techniques were essential. Tasks, resources, and notes were arranged using GitHub. In order to improve clarity and visual communication, the internship work also concentrated on documentation and presentation. Converted the instructional materials into useful PDF booklets, except for the later half of the course.
